

Washington DC Green Festival 2012

Green Festival, the nation's largest and most trusted environmental consumer event, returns to Washington DC on September 29-30, 2012. The weekend-long show will host leaders in the social justice and environmental community, an organic beer and wine pavilion, a Good Food Stage featuring delicious vegetarian cuisine as well as a dedicated kids' area for learning about easy and fun ways to incorporate green at a young age.

Featuring more than 300 eco-friendly businesses, the Green Festival marketplace is a great resource for seeking out new and innovative green products.

Green Festival will also feature influential speakers such as Ralph Nader and Amy Goodman and provide informational and exciting workshops, designed to empower and educate the public on living an eco-friendly life.

In addition, attendees will be able to participate in the Community Green Grant sponsored by Ford Motor Company and Green Festivals. A grant of $5,000 will be awarded to the proposed project that receives the most votes.

Tickets are $10 for a one day pass and $20 for a full weekend pass when purchased online at www.greenfestivals.org, or $15 and $25 at the door. Free admission for anyone who rides a bike to the event and parks with the bike valet, youth under eighteen, adults over sixty five, union members, volunteers and Green America and Global Exchange members. (All tickets provide access to exhibit floor, all workshops/yoga classes, speakers and films.)
