

Noble Profit Launches Syndicated Video Content & Website Dedicated To Sustainability And Clean Tech; Announces Distribution Deal With CSRwire

Noble Profit, the premier source of clean tech and sustainability content, announced today the availability of its unique media series and that it has formed a distribution partnership with digital media platform CSRwire.

Noble Profit publishes articles and produces video interviews on the latest news, views and trends with thought leaders who are setting standards in the emerging fields of clean technology and sustainable business.

Noble Profit content will now be available as a channel on CSRwire and available for any publisher to use at no charge.

“We are proud to bring the impressive library of video interviews compiled by Noble Profit to our audience,” said Aman Singh, Editorial Director of CSRwire. “As the market for sustainability and clean tech expands, there will be increased demand for well-produced content like the media series compiled by Noble Profit.”

With more than 75 high quality video interviews already produced, Noble Profit is the only library of its kind on sustainability, containing insights from some of the most influential clean tech and sustainability leaders of our time, including investors, entrepreneurs, CEOs, corporate sustainability leaders and other expert. Accompanying each short-form interviews will be articles by a solicited network of category experts and writers.

“There is simply no better partner than CSRwire to bring attention to our media series on the technologies, innovations and emerging trends in sustainable business, triple bottom line best practices and clean tech investing,” said Amy Seidman, founder of Noble Profit. “They hold authority in this space.”
