

TE Connectivity publishes 2013 Corporate Responsibility Report

SCHAFFHAUSEN, Switzerland – May 9, 2014 – TE Connectivity (NYSE: TEL) released its 2013 corporate responsibility report today giving a comprehensive look at the company's progress in environmental impact reduction, social responsibility in the supply chain, community involvement, corporate governance and responsibility in the workplace. TE's 2013 corporate responsibility report highlights several key accomplishments including:

- The company demonstrated continued environmental responsibility in its operations by reducing greenhouse gases by 17 percent; energy consumption by 12 percent; water usage by 16 percent; wastewater discharge by 15 percent; and hazardous waste by 42 percent.
- TE localized 87 percent of its nearly $4.6 billion global material spend, contributing to the regional economies in which the company has operations.
- The company and its Foundation made contributions of over $3.5 million to charitable causes around the world.

"Since 2007, TE has grown to become the largest connectivity company in the world," said Tom Lynch TE Connectivity Chairman and CEO. "While it is important for us to lead the connectivity market, we also focus on building our products responsibly throughout the supply chain and helping our customers meet global sustainability challenges while growing their businesses."
